The tracks at this point are unprotected. Zensky was on the track when a through express, going east, struck him, killing him almost instantly, killing the horse and demolishing the wagon, the contents of which were scattered along the track for a hundred feet.

A crowd soon gathered. The train entered the station, and the trainmen informed headquarters of the accident. Word was sent from Long Island City to Leonard Ruoff, at Ozone Park, to take charge of the body. He sent Gustave Hoffman to remove the body. Hoffman drove rapidly over the eight miles and reached the place a little after 5 o'clock. When he told the people at the crossing that he wanted to take the body to Ozone Park there was an angry protest from several men in the group of spectators, friends of Coroner Smith, of Inwood, who declared that the body should not be removed, as the accident took place just inside the boundary of Coroner Smith's district.

The boundary line marking the jurisdiction of the two Coroners is the one which separates that part of Queens County which les in New-York City from the eastern part of the county.
